the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries form a very distinctive period in European food history. This was a time when enduring feudal constraints in some areas contrasted with widening geographical horizons and the emergence of a consumer society. While cereal-based diets and small-scale trade continued to be the mainstay of the general population, elite tastes shifted from Renaissance opulence toward the greater simplicity and elegance of dining à la française. At the same time, growing spatial mobility and urbanization boosted the demand for professional cooking and commercial catering. An unprecedented wealth of artistic, literary, and medical discourses on food and drink allows fascinating insights into contemporary responses to these transformations. A cultural history of food in the early modern age presents an overview of the period with essays on food production, food systems, food security, safety, and crises; food and politics; eating out; professional cooking; kitchens and service work; family and domesticity; body and soul; representations of food; and developments in food production and consumption globally.

A cultural history of peace presents an authoritative survey from ancient times to the present. The set of six volumes covers over 2500 years of history, charting the evolving nature and role of peace throughout history. This volume, A Cultural History of Peace in the Modern Age, explores peace in the period from 1920 to the present. As with all the volumes in the Illustrated Cultural History of Peace set, this volume presents essays on the meaning of peace, peace movements, maintaining peace, peace in relation to gender, religion, and war, and representations of peace. A Cultural History of Peace in the Modern Age is the most authoritative and comprehensive survey available on peace in the twentieth and twenty-first century.

The conference or summer school Main Trends in Cultural History was held in Amsterdam on June 18–27, 1991. p. 5
