this book makes a timely contribution to debates surrounding transnational political participation the relationship between diasporas and conflict and the gendered experiences of migrants it fills a significant lacuna in research by analysing how migrants relate to and become involved in the politics of their home and host countries and how transnational political fields emerge and function the author achieves this by focusing on the little known but instructive case of colombian migration to europe and the connections between these flows and the armed conflict and efforts for peace in colombia shedding light on different types of migration and the rising complexity of international population movements this innovative work will appeal to students and scholars of migration and diaspora studies gender political participation conflict and peace studies and latin american studies it will also interest policy makers and community development workers engaged in these areas wherever the european has trod death seems to pursue the aboriginal so wrote charles darwin in 1836 though there has been considerable discussion concerning their precise demographic impact reflected in the articles here there is no doubt that the arrival of new diseases with the europeans such as typhus and smallpox had a catastrophic effect on the indigenous population of the americas and later of the pacific in the americas malaria and yellow fever also came with the slaves from africa themselves imported to work the depopulated land these diseases placed europeans at risk too and with some resistance to both disease pools africans could have a better chance of survival also covered here is the controversy over the origins of syphilis while the final essays look at agricultural consequences of the european expansion in terms of nutrition both in north america and in europe
